Re: Letter of Reference for Robert Laurie

To Whom It May Concern:

I first met Robert Laurie in 2005 when he interviewed and joined the Business Department at Northern Marianas College.

He taught primarily Microsoft Office, computer programming, and web site design classes at the college. His CS222 Web Site Design class was very popular and attended by many students at the college.

Students liked him and he was regarded as a very knowledgeable instructor. In addition he was very active in the overall affairs of the Business Department and college. He made many positive contributions and earned the respect of his peers. He did most of the scheduling of classes and book orders for the computer program. He created a computer curriculum reform plan for the college's computer program and participated in assessment activities at the college. He created two very reliable instructional computer labs on campus to support the department classes that utilized disk imaging for reliable software installation and maintenance. He was one of the leaders on campus for promoting and utilizing the college's Moodle Course Management System software for online and hybrid delivery of classes.

Without any reservations I submit that any educational institution or corporation would be well served to give serious consideration to hiring Mr. Laurie as a faculty member or information systems specialist.
